- On Friday at 11:30 a.m., Shad Reinstein and Jody Laine will not be on the “Twentieth-Century Sapphic Cultures” panel. Louise Drapeau will present in their place. Louise Drapeau’s presentation is titled, “The Disappearance of Formal Music Classes in Quebec Primary Schools due to Heteronormativity Pressures and Control from Homeroom Teachers.” Here is Drapeau’s abstract: During the first quarter of the XXIst Century, in Quebec primary Schools, though embedded in the Rioux Report for the Arts and recognized by Neurosciences for their Purposes and good learning Results, the XXth Century live Music teaching Methods seem to not connect anymore with a Clientele that shows little Respect for both « Learning and Teachers ». Indicators point towards 1) residual and long-lasting Analphabetism, 2) towards narcissistic Personality Disorders, heteronormative Beliefs, behavioral Challenges and 3) Displays of idiosyncratic Rights, Control and Powers that try to overrule the Government’s educational Program into Individualised Accommodations and Exclusions of all Sorts. In other Way, some Individuals, officially belonging to the Majority Group, nibble to get Attention and Treatments that usually go to Diversity, special Needs, and visible Minority Rights Students, with the ultimate goal to reshape their own personal status into a Minority one.
- On Friday at 4 p.m. Ann Cvetkovich will not moderate the panel “The Power of Coalitional and Collective Politics.” SaraEllen Strongman will moderate.

Saturday

- On Saturday at 8:15 a.m., the panel “Fat Lesbians: Intersectional Identities, Positive Representations, and Naked Photos” is cancelled.
- On Saturday at 11:30 a.m., Jocelyn Heath will not present on the panel “Lesbian Creativity and Nostalgia” (1). Replacing Jocelyn will be a group presentation titled “Creating Lez Out!: A Student/Faculty Reflection on Collaborative Lesbian Zine-Making as Curriculum.” Presentation description: In winter 2025, over the course of 10 weeks, students in DePaul University’s “Lesbian Lives” class created a collaborative zine situated in the legacy of lesbian print culture as a way to build community, illuminate course themes, construct lesbian subjectivities, and document lesbian lives. In the zine, students addressed topics pertinent to Lesbian Lives from pop culture and media representations to gender diversity and lesbian erotics. In this presentation, students from the class will reflect on their experiences of creating the Lez Out zine, introduce the course objectives and class structure, and discuss what they learned while making a zine together—highlighting the necessity of forums where lesbian life and culture cannot/will not be restricted from the algorithm. Copies of Lez Out will also be distributed at the presentation. DePaul LGBTQ Studies Student-Faculty Collective Participants: Eleanor Massengill (they/any; co-Editor), Ellie Calvert, Ellen Cunningham (they/them), Madeleine Dickerson (she/her), Sylvia Ebeid (they/she), Olivia Littleton (she/they), Sigrid Smith (she/they), Dra. Heather Montes Ireland (she/ella).
